History

Señorio de Beade is a family-owned winery founded by the González-Vázquez family in 1987, located in the town of Beade, Ourense, within the “O Ribeiro” denomination of origin. Since its inception, significant investments have been made, and the most advanced technologies have been implemented to produce both white and red wines, taking into account traditional methods and grape varieties.

Bodegas A Portela embodies the essence of Ribeiro wines. We produce our wines from various red and white grape varieties grown on vineyards located on the slopes of the Avia River, from which this denomination of origin derives.

Terroir*

The soils are very poor, with low clay content, but they have a characteristic high level of granite sand called “Sabrego,” typical of the Ribeiro region. The mountains isolate the area from the influence of the Atlantic Ocean. The slightly continental climate, combined with prevailing air currents, creates a significant temperature difference between day and night, which promotes the slow ripening of polyphenols, resulting in rich and aromatic wines.

The soil and climate conditions in the Avia River valley are ideal for growing local grape varieties, such as Treixadura, Albariño, and Loureira for white wines, as well as Mencía and Caiño Susón for red wines.

Vineyards

Currently, the winery owns 12 hectares of its own vineyards and exclusively exploits other 15 hectares of separate plots in the Avia River valley in Beade. The optimal orientation of the vineyards, sunny exposure, and the unique characteristics of the terrain give our wines distinctive qualities that make them characteristic and authentic. The use of local grape varieties, combined with high-quality winemaking practices, allows us to produce wines with character, distinguished by elegance, freshness, and a pronounced varietal character. This is confirmed by numerous awards and recognition at both national and international levels.

* Terroir (fr.) refers to the location and unique characteristics of the environment where grapes are grown.
